READY TO CONQUER YOUR MOUNTAIN OF DEBT

But unsure where to start?

CONSIDER ONE OF TWO DEBT PAYOFF METHODS.

DEBT SNOWBALL

Focuses on total debt size as a priority

With the debt snowball method, your goal is to pay off debt from the smallest balance to the largest balance, regardless of interest rate. With minimum payments made on all other loans except the smallest, your focus is on one loan, credit card, or other debt at a time while being intentional with your payments. Here's how it works:

- 1 Throw any extra income at the smallest loan balance while making minimum payments on other debts each month.
- 2 Once the first loan is completely paid, use those funds to roll into your next lowest balance loan.
- 3 Continue the process until you've paid off every debt.

Tons of people use the debt snowball method each year to tackle their mountain of debt. The most significant perk of the debt snowball method is that the small but quick wins are excellent motivators to keep you going on your debt-free journey until you've worked through all debts.

DEBT AVALANCHE

Focuses on highest interest as a priority

The debt avalanche method for tackling your debt is the process of starting with your debt of the highest interest rate, paying off, and moving to the next highest interest rate. Here's how it works:

- 1 Identify which debt has the current highest interest rate
- 2 Throw any extra income at the debt with the highest interest rate while making minimum monthly payments on other debt.
- 3 Once a debt is paid off, move on to the next highest interest rate debt until you've paid off every debt.

The debt avalanche method is a great way to tackle your mountain of debt. The most significant perk of the debt avalanche method is that you start by paying off the highest interest rate debt first which can save you hundreds or even thousands of dollars in interest.
